

14. The Protein Data Bank contains information relating to the structures of proteins. The structure of a protein is important because it is related closely to its
- (a) equilibrium constant.
  - (b) bonding capacity.
  - (c) nutritional value.
  - (d) function.